Mary in Our Plan of Life

The temptation that sometimes occurs when people resolve to live by a Plan of Life is to regard it as a series of independent religious exercises meant to build up different spiritual muscle groups that help us to become overall more fit in our faith. But a Plan of Life is much more than a bunch of discrete prayers and practices: it's meant to form us to live consciously and continuously in God's presence.

The greatest model and master of this type of life is the Blessed Virgin Mary, whose contemplative heart would ponder, treasure and integrate everything that occurred as pieces of a precious and beautiful mosaic (as St. Luke's original Greek words indicate as he describes Mary's "keeping all these things, reflecting on them in her heart" [Lk 2:19,51]). To live a Plan of Life, we do well to enter into Mary's school just like the first disciples did in the Upper Room before Pentecost.

The recent Popes have all stressed that the best way to enroll in Mary's Academy is through praying the Holy Rosary. And so, as we approach the month of October, which is traditionally dedicated to growing in devotion to Mary, it's fitting to focus on this greatest of all Marian devotions as a crucial part of our spiritual game-plan.

Pope Francis has said publicly that one of the means of his spiritual strength at 78 years of age is that he prays three Rosaries a day. One of his papal secretaries said about him, "He works tirelessly and, when he feels the need to take a moment's pause, he closes his eyes and ... simply sits and prays the Rosary. He prays at least three Rosaries a day. 'This helps me unwind,' he told me. Then he sets to work again."

Since 1985, praying three Rosaries a day has been part of Pope Francis' daily Plan of Life. The change happened when, as a priest, he witnessed St. John Paul II on his knees publicly leading the faithful in the prayer of the Rosary. He saw in his predecessor the fruits of Marian devotion and sought to follow St. John Paul II's example. Now he's hoping that we follow his.

My earliest childhood memories are of praying the Rosary with my family at the kitchen table. It taught me that God was real and part of our daily life. It also taught me how important daily prayer was, with others, for others, and mutually strengthened by others. It deeply nourished my priestly vocation. I've continued to pray the Rosary until this day. As part of the Plan of Life, spiritual authors recommend we pray one set of five mysteries a day, something that takes most people 12-15 minutes. If you've never prayed it, there are lots of accessible books, websites and apps to help you, as well as many people in our parish who I'm sure would be happy to teach you and pray it with you.

I've always been moved that in Michelangelo's famous Last Judgment in the Sistine Chapel, the "lifeline" that the angels hold out to lift people to heaven is a set of Rosary beads. It's an indication that the Rosary is a chain of love beads. It's an indication that the Rosary is a chain of love linking us to contemplate Christ so as to behold Him forever, as well as one that helps us, in communion with Mary and through her intercession, to glimpse, reverence and love Christ in those made in his image. The Rosary is one of the greatest means by which we enter into Mary's school and learn from her how to stay united with her Son through the joyful, radiant and sorrowful episodes of human life so as to be able to ponder with her forever the mysteries of eternal glory.
